Events Management

About this programme

The events industry can serve as a catalyst for economic growth and an opportunity for alternative income to boost the GDP of a region. The events industry is growing with “professionals” offering services as event organisers, wedding planners, and party planners. While a special set of skills is required to be a successful events manager, it is near impossible to find a suitably experienced events manager with a formal qualification in events management.

This programme will focus on the professional development of events managers in order to ensure seamless execution of any type of event, within various environments and industries. This will contribute to the indispensable skillset required in preparation for large international events.

How you will benefit

- Demonstrate practical knowledge of designing, planning and coordinating an event for a given context
- Utilise research tools (conduct research based on the design and planning of an event)
- Evaluate the success of an event
- Demonstrate practical knowledge of logistics in events management
- Demonstrate practical knowledge of liaising with contracting parties within the event management sector
- Demonstrate an understanding of sponsorships and corporate social investment
- Apply basic financial principles

Key focus areas

- Research and development
- Designing your event
- Planning your event
- Executing your event
- Evaluation of your event

Who should attend

Participants will be drawn from government sectors and the tourism and hospitality industry amongst others. Others will include participants who intend working as an events manager, or will be organising an event in the future.
